MRS. BROWN COMES BACK TO GLENDALE

Had Wonderful Year in England But Considers America Best

CONDITIONS ABROAD

Maimed Veteran Is Sad Problem of British Isle, She Says

"Yes, I had a wonderful year in England, but I am glad to be at home in my own country, the best country on earth. Give Glendale my best love," is the message of Mrs. J. B. Brown, mother of Howard Brown of Glendale and of Walter Brown, head of the American relief commission in Europe.

"I haven't a word of disparagement to say about England, for I was treated with the utmost courtesy and cordiality, especially by what they would term 'the upper classes,' whom I found delightfully simple and unaffected in their ways.

"They think they are very democratic and perhaps in some ways they are more liberal in their treatment of the masses than are we. For instance, there seemed to be no check on free speech, no matter how seditious it might seem, and all kinds of meeting, addressed by all kinds of radicals, were constantly going on in Hyde park, which the police would be very apt to suppress here. But I would be in high disfavor were I to go to church with my maid and allow her to sit in the same pew with me. It isn't done, you know, and tends to disorganize social distinctions. For the same reason one must be courteous to servants, but must not hold any social converse with them.

"The ease of living here is incomparably greater, to my mind, and I found the everlasting 'tipping' a great discomfort. Even in visiting a church you could get no civil answer from a verger until you had tipped him.

"England is having a harder problem with the ex-service men because they are more numerous than here. It is a sad sight to see them lining the streets, one here with a flute, another there with a horn, another singing and receiving the contributions of the charitable, which they would rather take than the stipends the government is able to give them. And the people are generous and warm-hearted, always ready to give.

"Everywhere, too, one sees statues in memory of the soldiers erected by communities or counties in little nooks or at cross-roads.

"It was hard for my son Walter and I to say goodbye. When he left me on the good ship Lapland in which I crossed, it was to go to Russia with Mr. Hearter and Mr. Ricard, who are the representatives on this side of the water of the American relief commission. They wanted to look the situation over and see how the crops planted with the seed America furnished are coming on. If they turn out well he is hoping America can withdraw its relief by next January. If there is drouth or other disaster, the help will have to be continued. They started out to feed 2,000,000 children, but since then have had to increase their beneficiaries to 8,000,000, including many adults. When their work first began the Russians knew nothing about the use of Indian corn as food and had to be taught to cook it and to learn to like it. For a long time they preferred their own concoctions of roots, grass and mud. Now they are learning fast.

"I visited Belgium and France and saw many interesting things in both countries. The Belgians are wonderful in their resiliency, in the way they have gone to work to rebuild their devastated country. They seem to me more hopeful and practical than the French. I never saw so much drinking anywhere as in Paris. London is bad enough, but in Paris it almost seemed as though they had nothing to do but to drink. All the way to Versailles the sidewalks were lined with cafes in which people were drinking.

"One of the curious sights of Paris is the market held two days a week in which on a certain street the people are allowed to gather and offer for sale anything they have been able to scrape together from rubbish to valuable antiques or new garments. It is like a rummage sale on a huge scale.

"As I said in the first place, I had a good time, but I am glad to be in Glendale."

CLASS OF 1921 TO HOLD REUNION

The class of 1921 of Glendale high is holding a reunion tonight at Brookside park. Those who will go are expected to meet at the high school at 6:15. Everyone anticipates a splendid time. The committee in charge includes Francis Reed, Louise Wimmer and Wilbur Johns, who will act as toastmaster. He was former president of the class.

Features Are Added to Editorial Page; Read Them Tonight

Attention is called to two new features on the editorial page, a scientific article each evening, and "The Right World" by W. Curtis Nicholson. These are in addition to the philosophical column by James W. Foley, the comment on the day's news by Henry James, able editorials, "Watching the Parade" by John Pilgrim, "Just Between Ourselves" by Della Stewart, Dr. Frank Crane's daily contribution and the other splendid features.

It is the belief of the publishers that this editorial page ranks with any editorial page in any newspaper in the country. Each evening there is set before the readers of this paper on the editorial page a world of information, discussion, comment and thought.

Take, for instance, "The Listening Post" tonight. There you will find as fine a line of thought presented in a readable manner as could be found in any newspaper or magazine.

"One of the greatest pleasures I have," writes a reader, "is to make it a point to read the editorial page each evening before I turn out the light for the night. I make it a point to take the paper to bed, compose myself comfortably and then read this page from the 'Truths in Epigrams' down to the very last article. I thank you for this blessed privilege."

GULICK LEAVES CITY EMPLOY

Resignation Is Accepted With Regrets by City Council

At the meeting of the city council last night, C. D. Gulick, transportation manager for the city during the fight for a municipal bus line between Glendale and Los Angeles, tendered his resignation. The council voted to accept Mr. Gulick's resignation, and instructed the city clerk to write a letter of appreciation to him for his work on behalf of the city. Mr. Gulick's resignation became effective today.

In tendering his resignation to the council, Mr. Gulick said that, as the council had deemed it advisable to withdraw recent applications he was ordered to file, for the establishment of a bus line to Los Angeles by way of Broadway and Verdugo road in Glendale and along the yellow car line to avenue 36 in Los Angeles, and another permit for a route over Brand and Glendale boulevards, there was nothing more for him to do. The applications referred to by Mr. Gulick had been filed recently with the board of public utilities of Los Angeles.

A second reason given by Mr. Gulick for resigning was that the city council does not believe that they should place the matter of voting bonds for motor busses on the ballot this fall. Mr. Gulick stated that the council had formerly agreed with him that the citizens should have an opportunity to decide whether or not they wanted motor bus service and lower rates.

Mr. Gulick said that some of the residents of East Glendale had complained that the permits applied for, if granted, would interfere with the electrifying of the Salt Lake line on Glendale boulevard.

He stated that, as there seems nothing further for him to do at this time, there is no need for him to continue in his present capacity, incurring further expense for the city.

SENATOR KELLOGG IS RENOMINATED

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 20.—Senator Frank B. Kellogg, Republican candidate to succeed himself, piled up a heavy lead over two opponents in early returns from Monday's primary.

Returns from 243 precincts out of 3438 gave: Kellogg, 16,255; Ernest Lundeen, 7,747; Richard Titus, 1,762.

Anna D. Olesen, Democratic candidate for the United States senatorial nomination, gained a slight lead over Thomas J. Meighen, in the first scattering returns. The vote in 148 precincts: Mrs. Olesen, 1511; Meighen, 1453.

Edward Indreheus had a slight lead over Merle Birmingham in the contest for the democratic nomination for governor.

GRAFTED ON BUILDING

CHICAGO, June 20.—Fred Mader, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, today faced a sentence of one year in the penitentiary and payment of a fine of $1000.

He was convicted by a jury at midnight on charges of conspiracy to halt construction on the Drake hotel and conspiracy to extort money through calling of strikes.

EXECUTED FOR MURDER

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 20.—John Henry Gackenbach, 21, Franklin, Pa., was executed in the electric chair here today for his part in the murder of John C. Boon in Marion, Ohio, last February. "I am innocent of this crime. God bless you all," were his last words.

COUNCIL TO RECONSIDER PARKING LAW

City Attorney Shaw Gets Instruction to Draw New Ordinance

THREE ASK ACTION

New Measure May Lose When Votes Are Cast

Steps were taken last night at the meeting of the city council to repeal the present parking ordinance. City Attorney Hartley Shaw was instructed by a two-thirds vote of the council, to prepare an ordinance repealing this parking ordinance. This ordinance is to be introduced at the next meeting of the council.

While the order to start action to repeal the ordinance was carried by a two-thirds vote, there is still a possibility of its being defeated. Councilman Kimlin and Davis and Mayor Spencer Robinson voted to start action. Councilmen Stephenson and Lapham voted against it.

The minority voters stated that they will vote to repeal this ordinance only when the property owners request such action.

The ordinance necessary to repeal the present parking ordinance will be introduced at the next meeting of the council. It will have its final reading and be voted on for adoption at a later meeting of that body.

The possible failure of the repealing of this measure lies in the fact that when it comes up for adoption Councilman Davis and Mayor Robinson may be out of the city on their vacations.

It is understood that Councilman Davis is planning to leave within a short time for a trip through the east. The mayor is contemplating a vacation. This vacation may be postponed until after the voting on the parking ordinance.

Until action is taken definitely, one way or the other on this measure, it is still a traffic violation to park an automobile on the business streets for more than two hours.

C. OF C. DECIDES TO PUSH BOOKLET PUBLICATION

Board of Directors Authorize Advertising Committee

The advertising committee of the chamber of commerce was instructed, last night at an executive session of the directors, to go ahead with the work of compiling a booklet advertising Glendale. An appropriation of $1500 was voted for this work several weeks ago by the board. Later there was some question as to the advisability of spending this sum at this time.

Lloyd H. Wilson, chairman of the advertising committee, was present and made a report to the board regarding the various grades of paper to be used and the sizes of booklets that he had received bids for.

Mr. Wilson told the directors that the earliest date the copy for the book could be prepared would be August 1. He stated that it would in all probability require more time than that. On the face of this report the directors ordered the committee to go ahead with its work. The directors are of the opinion that by the time the book is ready to go to press enough money will have been collected from memberships that are due to bear the expense of publication and leave a substantial balance.

The matter of informing the public as to what the chamber of commerce is really doing for Glendale was discussed. It was decided that the secretary and his assistant shall prepare a report, to be published in each of the daily newspapers, telling exactly what is being done by the organization.

It was reported that the people of Glendale, not members of the chamber, are asking the question, "What is the chamber doing for the city?" This report is intended to answer this query. The approximate number of calls made by E. F. Sanders, assistant secretary, on prospective members, trips to other cities on behalf of Glendale by Secretary James Rhoades and his assistant, the number of new industries brought to this city through the efforts of the chamber and the number of residents that have decided to make their homes in Glendale as a result of literature sent out by the chamber, will be tabulated and made public in this report.

CREDIT MEN MAKE PROGRESS IN DRIVE

New Members Are Being Gathered in Rapidly, According to Reports

Splendid progress is being made in the membership drive, according to reports read by the leaders at the regular meeting of the Merchants' Credit association, held Monday noon at the chamber of commerce.

"Major" Butts of the red division reported the enrollment of the following new members: Harry E. White, Inc.; Lyman & Lund, service station; Acme Painting company; Grossman-Miller Furniture company; Pendroy Dry Goods company; Charles A. Fisher, service station; Fox-Woodsum Lumber company; F. H. Reed, nurseryman; C. W. Ingledue, meat market; Glen Inn. N. A. Jossby, who recently purchased the interest of William G. Pigott in the Glen Inn stated that it was his aim and purpose to serve the best at the luncheons each week and that their motto was "The customer is always right."

New members secured by "Major" Potter's division were: J. T. Allen, Glendale florist; W. J. Bettenger Lumber company, Eagle Rock; Steven's Paint store; James F. McBryde, attorney; Ed N. Radke, jeweler; David Donwell, Little Premium market.

It was decided, by the consent of the leading division, to continue the membership campaign for one more week.

A committee was appointed to call upon the city manager and demand that action be taken at once to bring about an improvement in the collection of garbage and rubbish, so that such service will be satisfactory to the merchants.

Mr. Bosworth of the Pacific Coast Exposition company presented the matter of holding a trade exposition in Glendale this fall, but a vote showed that all of the merhcants of Glendale would soon have an opportunity to assist in the raising of the $25,000 bonus necessary to assure the electrification of the Union Pacific-Montrose line, which means so much in the development of the transportation between here and Los Angeles.

President Emery called a meeting of the executive committee to be held at the chamber of commerce Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

PATTERSON AVE. MASS MEETING CALLED

Those Interested in Opening of Thoroughfare Asked to Attend

Everyone interested in the opening of Patterson avenue, from San Fernando road to the heart of Glendale, are requested to attend a mass meeting tonight at the Central avenue school at 7:30 p. m. The people of the newly annexed northwest section of the city are extremely interested in the opening of this street.

The residents of the northwest, through the Foothill improvement association, in making their plea to have the street opened say that by opening Patterson avenue the city will acquire another through street. This street will open up a section of the city that is at present almost inaccessible from the San Fernando road. They claim that the opening of the street will also tend to divert more traffic through the city of Glendale. This traffic, according to the claim of that section, is, at present, skirting the city and entering Los Angeles over the San Fernando road.

Director J. G. Huntley, of the chamber of commerce, speaking on behalf of the Foothill improvement association, at the last meeting of the directors, took up this matter. He was told by Director C. E. Kimlin, who is also a member of the city council, that the city has already taken steps to open the street. The papers are being prepared and will be acted on at the first opportunity.

TABLE BONUS BILL

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The bonus bloc in the senate was crushed today when it challenged the action of the republican majority in delaying action on the soldier bonus.

By a vote of 51 to 22 a motion for immediate consideration of the bonus was "laid on the table" which is equivalent to defeat.

HONOR ASSEMBLY HELD AT HIGH SCHOOL

Distribution of Trophies and Recognition of Efforts Given

At a 10 o'clock assembly this morning, over which Lucy Strother presided, the honor pins not already bestowed were presented to those to whom they had been awarded with ceremonials which lent dignity to the occasion, and with applauding students filling every seat and lining the walls and doorways. On the platform were members of the retiring cabinet and members of the new cabinet, who were introduced and installed by Principal George U. Moyse. The president, Evert Smits, formally pledged himself to live up to all the responsibilities of his office to the best of his ability, and the other members of the cabinet took similar pledges.

The presentation was made by Mrs. George U. Moyse, who dwelt on how much the standard of the school with the university authorities was benefited by the work of these honor students, and how greatly they should be respected by the student body.

Bronze pins were awarded to Florence Bruce, Victor Colburn, Dick Fisher, David Foltz, Mary Greensides, Lois Kimball, Lawrence Knapp, Lloyd Knapp, Pauline Phillips and Dorris Potter.

Besides the honor pins, "cabinet pins" were bestowed upon retiring student body officers by their leader and president, Miss Lucy Strother, the various secretaries receiving them being: Victor Colburn, vice president and secretary of debating; Paul Holland, secretary of assemblies; Walter Sullivan, secretary of publications; Fern Peters, secretary of finance; Fred Stoft, secretary of athletics; Wilfred Cline, secretary of boys; Virginia Huntley, secretary of girls; Dorothy Peart, secretary of state; Dorothy Cotton, secretary of girls' athletics; Don Cameron, yell leader.

When the applause had died away, Miss Strother introduced Mr. Butterfield, athletic coach, who presented to her, as the official representative of the school, two pennants, won by the 130-pound basketball and football teams, the only teams which succeeded in winning pennants from the Central league. These were received by her with a gracious word of appreciation, followed by big applause from the audience.

Doris Packer was then introduced and made an excellent talk on the development of the Girls' league and the fine work accomplished by it under the leadership of its president, Virginia Huntley, to whom she presented a beautiful gavel as a token of appreciation. Virginia responded briefly, declaring anything she had been able to do had been due to the wonderful cooperation of the league members.

Paul Hutchinson presented to Miss Strother, for the school, the beautiful silver cup won by him in the Southern California oratorical championship contest, expressing the joy it had been to him to be able to bring it to the school. Miss Strother accepted it with the assurance that there was no member of the student body of whom it was prouder than Paul.

Miss Strother then explained a modification of the present system of student government which is to be established the coming year, and then, after telling what a pleasure her work as president of the student body had been because of the loyal support of its members and the splendid cabinet which had assisted her, she presented the gavel, symbol of office, to Evert Smits. She said to no student would she surrender it with greater confidence in his ability to make good and "carry on."

Evert accepted it with a serious smile, and the assurance he would endeavor to avoid the malady against which Mr. Moyse had warned, the "swelled head," and that, with the help of his cabinet, would strive to maintain the high standard set by Miss Strother.

Then, with the announcement by George Jordan that the Stylus is now on sale, the assembly closed.

NEW CITY PHYSICIAN IS NAMED

Dr. Eckles Resigns Because of Pressure of Private Practice

COUNCIL REGRETFUL

Letter of Appreciation Is Sent to Retiring Official by Resolution

Dr. Eckles presented his resignation as health officer of Glendale, last night, at the meeting of the city council. The council accepted his resignation and upheld City Manager Reeves' appointment of Dr. Gerhard Kaemmerling to the post.

Dr. Eckles gave as his reason for tendering his resignation the fact that his outside practice has become so heavy that it is impossible for him to give the proper time to city business.

The council accepted the resignation of Dr. Eckles and instructed City Clerk A. J. Van Wie to write a letter of appreciation for his services to Dr. Eckles.

Dr. Kaemmerling, the new appointee, is well-known in Glendale. He has practiced medicine here for several years and during the World war was an officer in the army medical corps. Dr. Kaemmerling is also an active member in the Glendale Post No. 127, American Legion. The new appointee will take office immediately.

The question of repealing the ordinance requiring all dogs to wear muzzles was discussed, but no action was taken. It was decided to refer the matter to the new health officer for his opinion.

JOHN H. BRALEY TO TELL OF PIONEER DAYS AT CLUB

Tuesday Club Secures Address for This Afternoon's Forum

John Hyde Braly of this city, who was the speaker today at the forum meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon club, not only told a pioneer's story of pioneer days in California, but flashed a picture of the evolution of this country from the days before the era of machinery when life was simple and each farm an independency.

He also gave a clue to his age, calculated to test the historical knowledge of his audience when he informed them that he arrived on this planet in the midst of Jackson's administration, an adminsitration which history calls the era of the awakening of the American mind to inventions.

Mr. Braly feels a prideful interest in the fact that his birth antedated the inventions which have revolutionized life in this country. As he points out, when Andrew Jackson left his farm near Nashville, Tenn., to travel 600 miles to the capitol for the inauguration, he went in a stage coach and traveled for three or four weeks over bad dirt roads. When he arrived in the little old town of Washington, D. C., he found its dirt streets poorly lighted, with whale oil lamps and tallow candles. There were no railroads and the first steam vessels were trying to wriggle acros sthe Atlantic in three weeks. Coal had been discovered but had not been used for fuel. Prof. Morse of Harvard, was experimenting with lightning, trying to make it run along a wire to the house of another professor and register ticks. He didn't succeed until 1844 when he stretched the first line between Baltimore and Washington.

BRING BODY HOME

WHITTIER, Cal., June 20.—The body of Harry Beals, 25, of Glendale, who was killed when a derrick collapsed at Getty's well No. 1 at Santa Fe Springs yesterday, was brought here today. Another oil worker named Sylvester Smith was injured in the accident, it was learned.

Flap Still At Fifty Says Edna Wallace Hopper

LOS ANGELES, June 20.—Edna Wallace Hopper, "the flapper at 50," today proclaimed to young girls that they can always be flappers.

Bob haired, slender, clear skinned, short skirted and vivacious, she was herself the living proof of it.

"Take care of your health and your skin, that's the secret. You'll be a flapper when you're fifty, and proud of it as I am," she announced.

Miss Hopper said that she recently had the youthful beauty of her face restored by surgery—freed from wrinkles and falling muscles.

The well known actress then went on to recommend various lotions and hair tonics.

But she would not admit it was a good thing for young girls to start out by marrying De Wolf Hopper, but she wouldn't deny it.

MARS SLIGHTS NORTH AMERICA

Lick Observatory Reports Him Flirting Below the Equator

LICK OBSERVATORY, MT. HAMILTON, Calif., June 20—Mars, well-known planet, has displayed rank discrimination against the astronomers of North America.

While it is nearer to the earth now than any time in recent history, it is visible so low on the horizon in North America that observations can be made only by looking through, for long distances, the atmosphere of the earth.

But in South America the planet has smiled on observers and is almost in the zenith.

As a result, North American astronomers have been forced to confine much of their work to spectroscopic examinations of the atmosphere surrounding the planet.

Dr. W. W. Campbell, noted chief of the Lick observatory here, explained the situation in discussing Mars and its visit today.

He expressed a belief that Signor William Marconi has slight chance of receiving any wireless messages from the planet and pointed out discrepancies in the work of the two leading astronomers trying to answer the question of whether there's life on Mars.

"I am aware of no reason for expecting that communications will pass between the two planets now or in the near future," Dr. Campbell said, discussing Marconi's experiments.

"But I do not speak for the distant future."

Discussing the work of Professor William H. Pickering of Harvard observatory and the late Professor Lowell of Lowell observatory, Arizona, Dr. Campbell declared that Professor Lowell describes canals believed to have been seen on Mars as "absolutely and mathematically straight for many hundreds of miles, with negligible exceptions."

"Pickering says the canals are nearly all curved and his recent drawings show them to be sharply curved," Dr. Campbell declared.

"Lowell says the canals are exceedingly narrow and sharply defined. Pickering says they are very broad, some of them hundreds of miles in breadth, irregular in width and poorly defined as to their edges.

"This condition has led a good many astronomers to ask the question—is it possible that Pickering or Lowell, one or both, has been trying to see surface features on Mars which exceed the powers of existing telescopes and human eyes?" he asked in conclusion.

RICH BUY GLANDS OF POOR OWNERS

Physician Reveals Trade Is General in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 20.—Purchase of human glands on a large scale, such as never realized by the general public, for the rejuvenating of aging men, was revealed here today by medical authorities.

Surgeons in many large cities have been experimenting with transference of glands, purchased by wealthy men from young and vigorous men who needed funds.

The operation on Harold F. McCormick, by which the life-giving glands of a young man were reported to have been grafted on the 51-year-old millionaire, has merely served to attract attention of the public to these operations, which have been no secret to the medical profession for several years, one surgeon stated.

This surgeon admitted that he had conducted frequent experiments and operations in transferring purchased glands from the body of one man to another.

McCormick's steady improvement was reported today, and it is believed he was about ready to leave the Wesley Memorial hospital, where he has been confined for ten days.

CITY GIVES FUNDS FOR PLAYGROUND

Council Votes $400 School Board Will Donate Same Sum

DIRECTORS NAMED

Central, Cerritos and Intermediate Chosen As Sites

The city council last night voted to appropriate $400 to be used for playgrounds at the city schools during the summer. The Grammar school board will appropriate a like sum. This money is to be used to open three playgrounds and keep them open during two months of the summer. The playgrounds will in all probability be opened at the Intermediate, Central avenue and Cerritos street schools.

The appropriation of the $400 by the city and the same sum by the school board provides that in addition to the regular equipment required for the grounds, three playground supervisors, or physical directors, shall be employed for the two months of summer vacation. There will be one head supervisor to receive a salary of $125 per month, and two assistant supervisors, or directors, at salaries of $115.

These men will be in charge of the playgrounds at all times, and will give any necessary instruction in the use of equipment and physical development. Regular programs will be laid out for the the playgrounds and will be carried out under the direction of the instructors.

According to L. T. Rowley, attendance officer of the schools, the instructors chosen for the playgrounds work are A. T. Blanford who is present head of the physical direction of the Grammar schools will be head director. His assistants will be N. C. Whytock of the Intermediate school, and Mr. Alvis of the Cerritos avenue school.

The playgrounds will be open to anyone living in the city. The grounds will be open on three days a week from 1 p. m. until 6 p. m. and on three days from 1 p. m. until 7 p. m.

All purchasing of supplies will be taken care of by the directors who will make the purchases and give an accounting for all money expended.

In order to let the public know how the young people of the city appreciate the playgrounds, an accurate check of attendance at all of the recreation centers will be kept and this record presented.

Speaking in favor of the playgrounds, Mr. Rowley stated that the police record of South Pasadena show that since the advent of summer playgrounds in that city the juvenile delinquency has decreased 75 percent. In Los Angeles it has been found that out of the numbers of children under juvenile supervision only one case has been found where the delinquent lives in the vicinity of a playground.

CITY BONDS WIN BIG PREMIUM

Improvement District Securities Bring $11.49 Bonus

The $23,000 bond issue for Improvement district No. 5 was sold sold last night on vote of the city council to the William Staats company.

The bonds were sold at par, with accrued interest and the purchasing company paid a premium of $11.49.

The addition of the 49 cents to the premium is due to the efforts of Councilman Sam Davis. When the premium was discussed Councilman Davis asked the representative of the purchasing company why the amount offered was only $11. He said that he thought at least 49 cents should be added to the premium. The purchaser agreed and that's that.

FIRE DESTROYS MAPLE AVE. HOME

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the home of M. Yoshimura, 829 East Maple, at an early hour this morning. The fire was reported to the police department at 1:30 a. m. by the telephone operator. Sergeant Kearns and Motor Officers Larock and Snyder responded.

The officers reported that the house was burned to the ground.

At 5 o'clock this morning Yoshimura reported to the police that the electric wires in front of the house were down. It is believed that this may have caused the fire. Superintendent of plant and production, P. Dieterich, was notified and will investigate.

PACIFIC AVENUE CHURCH GROWTH

95 New Members This Year, An Increase of 110 Over Last Oct.

The social hall of the Pacific Avenue Methodist church was filled last night, when the congregation gave a reception to the 54 new members recently taken in. There were about 150 present to enjoy the evening. Rev. Preston states that they have taken in 95 new members already this year, which is 110 per cent increase over what they had last October.

The program of the evening was in charge of the Epworth league, with Mrs. Donald Magill as leader. Rev. Preston introduced Mrs. Magill as fourth vice president of the league, and as the one in charge of the evening. She gave a few words of welcome to all new members, and a response was given by E. H. Scott.

Several jolly introducing games were played in order to make all members better acquainted, and these were followed by a piano solo by Miss Ethel Wilson. Miss Gladys Flagg then sang a beautiful number, accompanied by Miss Wilson. The next number was a clever reading by Herbert Scott.

After cooling refreshments of punch and wafers had been served, Rev. Preston heartily welcomed all new members. The closing number was the singing of two verses of "America," and all went home in good spirits.

SOUTH BRAND HITS LIMELIGHT OF FAVOR

Angelus Park Tract Close to Los Angeles Is Selling Well

Few people realize the rapid development being made on South Brand near the city limits of Los Angeles. No subdivision has built up more rapidly than the Angelus Park tract, which is destined to grow to a small city itself. This is one of the best tracts on the market and is being eagerly sought after by wise buyers who want good property, close in and at a price that is sure to treble in value within the next few months.

Among the high class subdivisions now being offered to the lot-buying public is Angelus Park, a fine residential tract, situated between two of the main arteries of travel, which connect the entire San Fernando valley with Los Angeles.

A record of tremendous growth has been shown by the construction of over 180 bungalows of various types and designs in the past year, the major portion of which were built by the individuals who bought homesites at Angelus Park for their permanent residence.

Practically a new home is now being started each day, and it is predicted that this well located tract will be solidly built up within the next few months.

A unique plan of building is being carried out and a new idea in financing is in effect at Angelus Park, which have made it possible for peolpe with moderate means to build and own their own home.

The agents of the property will be pleased to give full information regarding the plan of financing the construction of a house, which in the main is simple, requiring, as it does, but a small portion of cash available to get a home built.

SCOUTS STAGE OLD TIME ROUND TABLE

Real vivid, pioneer days of Daniel Boone and Abraham Lincoln were recalled last evening, when the troop leaders' roundtable gathered in the log cabin, which was built by the Burbank boy scouts, in Stough canyon, for their week-end camping trips.

One battered old lantern, a few candles, and the big, old-fashioned fire of logs in the open hearth, gave the only light in the room, and, as the fire crackled and the shadows deepened and then faded, the whole atmosphere lent itself splendidly to the program, which was given over to summer camping.

The scout leaders from Tujunga, Eagle Rock and Glendale assembled at the district scout office, and went by auto to the Burbank camp. Upon arriving at the camp they found the cabin dark and deserted, which had been previously arranged, and they filed in single file and silently took their seats on logs supplied for the purpose.

The first thing on the program was the lighting of the fire, and this was accomplished in record time by Scout Executive Harold Benner, who used the old Indian method of rubbing two sticks together. Following some peppy songs, Louis E. Hoffman, assistant director, department field service, Los Angeles council, B. S. A., gave a highly interesting talk, choosing as his subject, "What the Summer Camp Does for Your Scouts." He touched on the physical, mental and moral aspects of camping, and how character was bound to be molded in those who attended.

Following Mr. Hoffman's well-received talk, Leo L. Lang, forest supervisor of the Tujunga district, spoke on the hazards of leaving unextinguished camp fires, and urged the scout leaders to take every precaution against taking any chances. Scout Executive Benner spoke on the Catalina camp, telling of his recent inventory trip, and urging the leaders to make every possible effort to attend the vacation camp. Mr. Benner stated that over 60 boys had already signed up and that each day the applications keep pouring in from the boys.

A roundtable discussion followed, various troop problems being discussed. After some lively stunts, the meeting was brought to a fitting close by repeating the scout oath and the boy scout prayer.

"COME ON OVER" CLOSES TONIGHT

Rupert Hughes was a pioneer in translating human, natural comedy to the screen. He proves himself an adept in doing just that in his newest Goldwyn film comedy, "Come On Over," which closes at the Glendale theater tonight.

It is a delightful blending of comedy, romance and realistic characterizations. If you liked the same author's "Scratch My Back," "Hold Your Horses," "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead," you should by no means miss the opportunity of seeing "Come On Over."

It unfolds the love story of Shane O'Mealia, who came to America, leaving his sweetheart behind to be sent for after he was on the road to fortune. Shane's fortune always remains ahead of him, due to ill luck, and after three years, Moyna, the girl, is brought over by friends. She believes that Shane is going to marry Judy Grady, whose father he has befriended, and her spitfire temperament keeps Shane in hot water until, at an evening of old Irish dances, their feet lead them together.

Truths in Epigram

I hold every man a debtor to his profession; from the which as men, of course, do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and ornament thereunto.—Bacon (1561-1626).

Nature is more powerful than education; time will develop everything.—Disraeli (1804-1881).

STATE EXPENDITURES

Allegations that the government of this state is extravagant are frequent. An interesting feature of them lies in the circumstance that they are not true. It is possible in instances that they are made in good faith, because evolved from figures that at a casual glance seem to sustain them. Upon analysis, the allegations change into something less than vapor, and disappear.

In California many things are done by the state that elsewhere are done by counties. This requires large sums of which the state is the mere disbursing agent. In various forms the money goes back whence it came. California attends to the building of highways. It grants money per capita to school districts in accord with attendance. It maintains a mothers' pension. Its insurance department bulks big in the matter of expenditure, but it pays for itself.

Where school support is left to counties a district that is sparsely settled, or in which the residents are poor, has small chance. There may come a time when it will be unable to hire a teacher. The intervention of the state remedies this. It assures schools throughout the commonwealth. Similarly the building of roads, usually a county function, results in better highways at less cost than small communities could provide them. The mothers' pension is a form of charity that relieves communities of a large part of the care of their poor. In the absence of state intervention in this matter, the expenditures of the state as a whole would be less, but the combined expenditures of localities for the same purpose, probably would be greater than the state total.

It is easy to see how the figures standing forth without explanation might be construed as indicative of extravagance. With the facts cited as they pertain to each department, it is easy to see that the first judgment would be erroneous. The money comes from the people, and it goes back to the people, not in a manner representing loss to them, but a considerable gain.

THE LARGEST CLASS

Reports of graduations in all the cities of southern California present a singular likeness. Over most of them it has been necessary to place the line "The Largest Class." The grade schools and the high schools, the colleges, the private schools, each with hardly an exception, has just graduated the largest class in its history. In response to the conditions thus indicated, there has been a general movement for the enlarging of school facilities. While this necessitated the issuing of bonds, in instances to a large amount, there has not come to hand any account of the bonds being defeated. The people believe in education.

The increase in school attendance is a certain proof of a rapid increase in population. So rapid indeed, has the latter increase been, that existing accommodations have become gravely overtaxed. In making good the deficiency, the public has decided to prevent the recurrence of such condition. The intention is to keep a little in advance of the actual need. Every child must have its chance for a full day and for proper housing.

Since the war the ambition to be educated has been stimulated. Perhaps this was due in part to the fact that the war itself revealed an appalling degree of ignorance. Possibly the efforts of the government to train those whose early opportunities had been neglected is responsible. At any rate, schools are patronized as never before, and as never before, citizens cheerfully meet the bills although of unexampled magnitude.

THE GROWING HARBOR

People who read statistics of industrial growth hereabouts perhaps do not yet appreciate how large a proportion of this growth is expressed in development of the harbor at San Pedro. A few years ago the establishing of this harbor was regarded by many as an idle dream. The first steps were watched by maritime cities already established in the ocean trade, with a feeling that may be described mildly as bordering on contempt. A short term of years has brought wonderful changes. The contempt has vanished, giving way to admiration. The harbor has in many respects reached a place of foremost importance. It is being expanded and improved, and yet there is difficulty in keeping pace with the demand of increasing traffic.

Manufacturing has sprung up and reached large volume. One concern organized for building warships, and turning out many of the best type, has since then diverted its energies to other lines. It has a dry dock ample for accommodation of any merchant vessel sailing these seas. It repairs ships of every class. It now has contracts for renovation of two Pacific liners, and it is to build two ferryboats for use at San Francisco. It is manufacturing lumber products in vast amount. And it is but one of the institutions that is making of southern California, once regarded only as a resort for tourists, one of the leading industrial sections of the whole country.

THE IRISH CONSTITUTION

One correspondent sent word from London that the Irish election was certain to be a farce. He declared that the Irish had no knowledge of the constitution concerning which they were to vote, and could get none. This was the day before that set for voting. In issues of the same date as the letter of the correspondent, there came by cable what purported to be a correct synopsis of the constitution, the same document declared to be so secret. Hence it would be unreasonable to predict the course of the Irish, or the effect of the election, however it may go.

The constitution as outlined would strike the unbiased observer at a distance as being enminely fair. If adopted it would place Ireland in exactly similar position to that occupied by Canada with satisfaction both to the colony and England. But the outline forwarded may have been the mere conjecture of a correspondent anxious to be first with important news.

The people of America have watched the struggle in Ireland with sympathetic interest, and always with the hope that the outcome would be peace. They have tried, for the most part, not to itnerfere. Not competent in all respects to define the justice of the contentions, they have had faith that in the end, justice would be established. Many strong men representing the conflicting interests, doubtless are laboring to bring about such result.

DEMOCRACY AND EQUALITY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Speaking of Caruso's voice and referring to the fact that it was his own peculiar gift, and not common to men, the New York Globe recently observed:

"Nature is not democratic; she gives some women beauty and leaves others, of equal or greater merit, plain; she makes some persons intelligent and some stupid; she endows some with power to please and makes others incapable of inspiring friendship or admiration. In brief, we are not born free and equal nor do we become so; to some the gods bring gifts and others they pass by; there are aristocracies of voices, of beauty and of intelligence. The best democracy can ever do is to give every Caruso a chance to sing."

The idea here expressed is true enough. The wording is not happy. It confuses democracy with equality of personal gifts.

Democracy is equality, but it is only equality of opportunity.

All democracy does is to remove artificial and unjust privileges and restrictions.

Far from implying an equality of capacity, democracy is based upon variety and inequality.

It is artificial aristocracies that absurdly call every member of an arbitrary group noble, that call every jackdaw and mudhen a nightingale simply because he is somebody's nephew or enjoys some other unearned privilege.

Autocracy, the class system and the theory of heredity, shut the doors to opportunity and give the Carusos no chance to sing.

Democracy is merely the law of Nature as applied to society. Its effect is to give the reward to the man who earns it. And not to some ninny who enjoys the favor of the court.

Democracy has more great men and outstanding samples of genius than aristocracy; the only difference is that they are really great and are not merely called great.

Democracy discovers and exalts the most skilful statesman in England in the person of a little Welsh attorney while autocracy heaps honors upon the commonplace descendant of a very commonplace German family simply because it is royal.

Always the real leaders of men, the real kings have come up from the common people. The finest flowers in the human flora grow in the woods pasture and not in the hothouse; no privileged class, no royal house, no carefully selected stock produced a Leonardo or a Michelangelo in art, a Shakespeare or Burns in letters, a Galli Curci or Paderewski in music, a Socrates or Kant in philosophy, an Edison or Pasteur in science, a Wesley or a Knox in religion.

Neither autocracy nor democracy has anything to do with the personal qualification of individuals. All they have to do is with conditions.

Democracy opens all the doors, and lets in the sunshine and free air.

Autocracy is an attempt to improve human society by enclosing it in an artificial edifice of which some chambers may be gilded salons but most are stinking prison cells.

THE CLASSICS.

Written in a Country Churchyard.

Elegy.

When one realizes that Thomas Gray spent eight years, from 1742 to 1750, writing a poem of 128 lines, every word of which was carefully chosen and skilfully woven into a literary fabric of great beauty, it would seem not only a duty but surely a great privilege to read and reread his immortal verse.

In the little cemetery " beneath those rugged elms" the poet hears the curfew toll the knell "or parting day," sees "the glimmering landscape" fading "on the sight," and falls into a reverie.

About him "the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep" no more to enjoy the delights of early mornings; no more to sit before the blazing hearth, to hear the lisping voices of their children, or to make "the harvest to their sickles yield."

But their lives, humble and obscure as they were, must not be mocked, nor thought of "with a disdainful smile," for "perhaps in this neglected spot is laid some heart once pregnant with celestial fire," a Milton a Hampden, a Cromwell. The human material was there, but "chill penury repressed their noble rage, and froze the genial current of the soul."

And melancholy marked him for her own.
Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
Heaven did a recompense as largely send;
He gave to misery all he had, a tear,
He gained from Heaven ('twas all he wished) a friend."

Read this entire poem at your convenience. You will enjoy it.

The answer will be given tomorrow.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

William Randolph Hearst, whose travels abroad have been noted at length in his own papers, has won a tribute from a Berlin journalist. Jr this the writer says:

HENRY JAMES

"Hearst is pro-German and has remained so during the crucial time when the majority of the American people firmly believed in the crusade against German methods, the German spirit and the German political conception of the world."

Could tribute be finer? Could the quality of Hearst patriotism have been better set forth in a few brief words? And the truth, that is the essence and substance of this meed of praise, stands forth so clearly that none may question it.

But the German admirer, not content with lauding Hearst for his noble stand on behalf of the junkers, adds that the editor yodels beautifully. "I swear," adds he in his enthusiasm, "he yodels as if he were born in the Tyrolese Alps."

All very sweet and touching, this. Perhaps it would be well for his native land if, melted by such adulation, Hearst would stay over there indefinitely, and just yodel.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

My new doctor has a very interesting theory. He says that no one need grow old. He says that it is true that the calendar may bring in an indictment, but that in all essentials any man may stay young if he wishes to.

"We used to say that a man is as old as his arteries," says my new doctor. "But that isn't going far enough. A man is as old as he wants to be, arteries or no arteries."

He is a comprehensive cuss, this doctor of mine. He began by telling me that to stay young I must keep myself in good health. So he changed my diet and made me eat more vegetables and fruit and milk and cheese, and less of red meat and pastries. He gives me what coffee I need but refuses to let me spend the forenoon drinking it. He has made me play golf, although I have insisted that golf is a device for enabling old men to dodge work. Most of all he says that I must stop "thinking old."

I had almost stopped going to the theater. Now I am forced to go at least once a week. In order that I can do this with comfort he has revised my hours, so that I sleep late each morning. Therefore the morning after I get up feeling O. K. instead of having a taste of mother of ashes in my mouth. My cigars have been rationed. I have been taught to dance. It is true that I still feel compassion for the girls I dance with, but that is wearing off. I'm picking 'em younger and prettier, too, instead of hoofing around with elderly ladies.

He is making me read novels, instead of heavy books that keep me awake nights worrying what will happen to the world. I still read the heavies, of course, but not so many of them. I am forbidden grouches. He tells me that I have permitted the middle-aged man's vice of bad temper to grow on me. Most of that temper will be eliminated, he says, as soon as my general health is better, but in the meantime I am not to get mad. It is a queer thing, but I find that I can do that little thing. I have flattered myself by talking about my hasty temper.

Consarn it, I have been a mere bully. My temper is no worse than any other man's temper. I did not try to control it. That is all.

I thought he was a fool at first, but his idiotic system actually works. I've had three weeks of eating just enough of the right food and drinking just enough and smoking just enough and working just enough and playing plenty, and I'm feeling more like a kid than I have for a dozen years.

I'm beginning to laugh, too. He says that's the test. He says that as long as a man can get a good kick out of a good joke he can fight off age.

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA E. STEWART

They're working to perfect amplifiers nowadays. Every radio column is full of suggestions concerning them, and experts are hoping to perfect them so that radio hearing shall be freed of its incompleteness. What a delightful thing it might be if amplifiers could be purchased for personal use—not with radio outfits, but for general utility.

We might find it well to amplify our consciences occasionally when they seem to be very wee voices indeed. Our patience—how delightful it would be could we increase the volume of that! And how perfectly glorious it would be could we attach an amplifying device to that of others, unknown to them so they could not resent the deed.

Then there's our money. If we could only make that talk louder!

Our strength and our possibilities for accomplishment; how much we could achieve were a sort of mental amplifier obtainable!

Our knowledge of any desired topic, simply press the button, and presto, we become wise.

Our power of charm—our rather doubtful beauty—our personality; most of us would only be too glad to employ the services of an amplifier here.

Probably but few of us would choose to increase our duties, our responsibilities, our troubles.

Yes, if such an instrument were obtainable we'd all rush to buy it, or begin saving up our pennies and dimes toward its purchase. Very few of us could say we are satisfied with ourselves. But, alas! There's no such easy road to self-betterment, no obliging instrument to lift for us our limitations. The only amplifier we have is will power, and some of us do not even have that!

THE LISTENING POST

Pure Idealism was walking on air.
As it is likely to do.
Looking down on the earth with its plain duties.
And with its head in the clouds.
Seeing only partially the things of earth.

* * *

"I shall bring all people to this ideal state," he said as he floated along.
And his heart was light.
He sang.
And skipped along from cloud to cloud.
Watching the earth worms below him.

* * *

"There should be no hatred," he said. "There should be no greed. There should be no evil. Men should live in perfect harmony. I shall tell them that and they will come up here with me."
And he continued to tread the air.
Watching the people below him.

* * *

At one time he saw a farmer working in his field.
And he stopped in mid-air and called to him.
And the farmer heard a voice.
But could not see the speaker.
Because Pure Idealism was so far up in the air.

* * *

And the Voice said.
"Leave the fields and come walk on air with me."
And the farmer looked puzzled.
And replied:
"I can't. I have my crop to plant and harvest."
And the Voice said:
"But you have planted more crop than you need. No one should have more than he needs. Cease planting and come up here and walk with me. The air is fine."

* * *

And the farmer replied:
"I can't. I have a family to keep and my children to send to school and old age to look out for. I need to work while I may."
And he continued to till his field.
And the Pure Idealist was disappointed.
And continued to walk on air.

* * *

And as he walked he hailed various people below him from time to time.
An orchardist who was spraying his trees.
And he said:
"Stop spraying and come up here with me. There will soon be no parasites and destructive bugs in the world. Why spray?"
And the orchardist said: "Experience has taught me to battle with the evils there are. I can't afford to lose my fruit."

* * *

And so every one with whom the Pure Idealist spoke had an earthly reason for working.
And refused to get up into the air.
And walk on it.
And the Pure Idealist's disappointment increased.
"How earth-bound they are!" he cried.

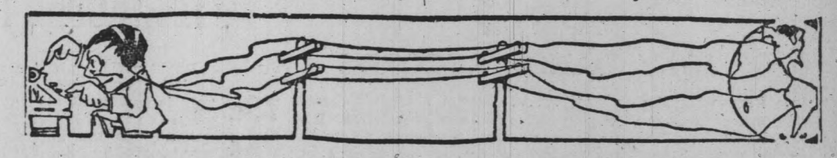
* * *

And below him just then he saw a sturdy figure with a clear eye and strong arms and a workman's jeans and cap.
"Who are you?" cried the Pure Idealist.
"I am Common Sense," replied the man below him.
"I am glad to see you," returned the Pure Idealist.
"I am puzzled. I want to be of service to people and get them up into the air, but they won't come. They seem to be earth-bound. What is the matter?"

* * *

And Common Sense replied:
"You are a radiant spirit, and no doubt your voice is heard. But you would do better if you got your feet on the ground."
And Common Sense went on about his work.
For he, too, was in a measure earth-bound.

JAMES W. FOLEY.



SONGS OF THE POETS

Tears—Anonymous

Weep you no more, sad fountains;
What need you flow so fast?
Look how the snowy mountains
Heaven's sun doth gently waste!
But my Sun's heavenly eyes
View not your weeping,
That now lies sleeping
Softly, now softly lies
Sleeping.

Sleep is a reconciling,
A rest that peace begets;
Doth not the sun rise smiling
When fair at even he sets?
Rest you then, rest, sad eyes!
Melt not in weeping,
While she lies sleeping
Softly, now softly lies
Sleeping.

Best Home-Made Amateur Radio Is in New Mexico

Louis Falconi, builder and operator of station 5ZA at Roswell, New Mexico, has the best American amateur radio station, the largest part of which is home-made. He has been awarded the Herbert Hoover cup for 1921 by the board of direction of the American Radio Relay league.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who is in charge of governmental radio regulation, last fall offered a cup to be presented each year during his administration through the American Radio Relay league to America's best all-around amateur station, the major portion of which is home made, as determined by a consideration of the extent to which the apparatus was home made, ingenuity displayed, electrical efficiency, transmitting range, receiving performance, observance of radio law, ability of the operator, amount of amateur traffic handled, and completeness of the station log.

Falconi, the operator of 5ZA, who receives the first award of the cup, so completely overtopped every other station and operator in the contest that he received the unanimous vote of the judges.

For several years Falconi's station has been the chief connecting link between the Mississippi valley and the west coast. He has had a splendid station located in a territory where amateurs are very rare, and so has been strategically located for the establishment of amateur records. His station has been heard in every state in the union except Maine, by ships off the Atlantic coast, and in the Pacific, and he is consistently heard in the Hawaiian islands. His station equipment not only includes a spark transmitter, but a continuous wave transmitter, I. C. W. telegraph, and a radiophone. The phone has been heard as far east as Indiana and almost every place inside that range. The equipment is entirely home made, and Mr. Falconi's accomplishment is all the more remarkable when it is considered that he is located in a small town in an out-of-the-way place where encounters with other amateurs are infrequent, and where difficulties are encountered in securing parts for the construction of apparatus.

Mr. Falconi was born in Italy and is 27 years old. He came to this country as a baby. Up to ten years ago he resided at Portsmouth, Va., when he moved west for his health. His interest in radio dates from 1911. He is at present local agent for the Exide storage battery at Roswell.

Signals from his station are familiar to amateurs everywhere almost. A great deal of relay traffic is handled through his station, and under big difficulties, as the distances worked are always much greater than those that the average amateur accomplishes. It was Falconi's station which connected Chicago with Los Angeles on the occasion of the last amateur transcontinental relay test, when a message was relayed from Hartford, Conn., to Los Angeles and the reply returned to Hartford in a total elapsed time of 6½ minutes.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

NEW NAIL IN THE TARRIF COFFIN

[Shoe and Leather Reporter]

Circumstances appear to be conspiring to impede the enactment of a tariff law. While political considerations impelled congressmen and senators to attempt tariff revision, it was realized that fluctuating conditions abroad will necessitate changes in the schedules. To get around this stumbling block a clause was framed giving the President power to increase or decrease the duties 50 per cent as emergencies may arise. A recent decision of Chief Justice Taft is susceptible of the interpretation that any delegation of the revenue-making power to the President is unconstitutional. Here is one more reason why the present attempt to revise the tariff should be abandoned until such time as the industrial countries of the world are ready to resume normal operations.

Cohen was an invited guest at the wedding and his shirt front was adorned with three massive diamonds which he had borrowed from a friend.

All the evening Cohen had endeavored to attract attention to the diamonds by ostentatiously pretending to adjust them, but no one appeared to notice them, much to his chagrin.

During the evening, however, he saw his chance and, advancing to the newly married couple in the center of the room, he said in a loud voice, "May your wedded life be as bright as these," pointing to the diamonds.

The large female, having reached the second step, with a glance of withering scorn, said: "If yer was 'arf a man, yer'd 'elp me up."

JOHN H. BRALEY TELLS OF THE EARLY WEST

Veteran of '48 Tells of California's Infant Days

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

The life of John H. Braley, which he briefly reviewed at the meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon club in connection with his reminiscences of pioneer days in California, has covered a wonderful period in the history of America. He admits it, and says: "When I was approaching my 'three-score-and-ten' years, like everybody else, I was saying: 'I wish I could live ten or twenty years longer to see what will happen.' Now that I have done it and lived beyond the time when I should have been released and have seen wonders happen, I am more anxious to live another twenty years to see what time will bring to pass.

"My birth time was before the days of lucifer matches. We had to play curfew every night and cover up the fire to save it for morning. One morning when somebody had been careless I had to take a bucket and run three miles through the woods to the home of my aunt to get a few coals, and run home again the three miles, before we could have breakfast.

"We had happy days, however, and were perfectly independent. We raised everything we ate and with which we clothed ourselves, on our little farm, 75 miles this side of what is now St. Louis, but which then was a little Dutch and French colony, strung along the river.

"Our clothing was made of flax, cotton and wool and it was all raised on the farm. My father was a Presbyterian circuit-rider, his library consisting of a little red Bible, a hymnbook, concordance and 'Pilgrim's Progress.'

"The picture of an evening in that Missouri loghouse in which my childhood was spent often rises before me. We would be gathered in a room about half as big as the Masonic hall. In the rear were two beds, curtained in, with trundle-beds under them. In the middle of the room stood the big spinning-wheel. At the right a big blazing fire in the fireplace gave warmth and light to the whole house. Father would be sitting on the righthand side of the fireplace, making shoes for the family. Mother, on the lefthand, would sit, carding wool or cotton into rolls, as fast as her blessed hands could fly. The rolls would then be passed to Adeline, a colored girl, who would convert them into thread or yarn on the big spinning wheel. The spools on which the thread was wound would be passed to my sister Sarah, 16 years old, who would place them on the little spinning-wheel to transfer them to the shuttles used in the loom, preparatory to the manufacture of the cloth.

"My older brother and myself would be on a bench with a thing between us which looked like a clothes-wringer. He would be turning the crank and I shoving the cotton between the rollers and sometimes getting my fingers pinched, to squeeze the seeds out of the cotton. That was the beginning of the cotton-gin.

"Mother would be not only carding the cotton into rolls but would also be tending a johnnycake before the fire. About 8:30 or 9 our tasks would be finished, the johnnycake would be done to a turn, the big wheel would be rolled away, everything put aside and the room cleared. Then we would have a jolly time eating the johnnycake and playing games in which our parents would join—'pussy wants a corner,' 'blind man's buff' and all the other dear old pastimes.

"Then, when everything was silent, father would open his little red Bible and read a few verses. Mother would lead off in a sweet song in which the children would join. Then we would all be on our knees while father commended us to the care of the tender Shepherd. Good-nights would be said and kisses exchanged and off to bed we would go.

"That was a sample winter evening in 1846-47, and on the 14th day of April, 1847, good-byes were said, tears were shed over the thought that relatives from whom we were parting we might never see again, and we were starting for the Pacific coast. We arrived in Portland, Ore., Christmas eve of the same year, having spent nine months in crossing the plains."

Our treatments are the same as used by the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium of Battle Creek, Michigan, and consist of diet, exercise, massage, electric light baths, salt glows, hot applications, hot and cold sprays, galvanic and sinusoidal electricity. The laboratories are equipped with fine X-ray machines with the latest stereoscopic improvements. Here the research work is also extensively carried on.

The efficient methods of treating the sick, combined with a scientific knowledge of the preparations and combinations of foods used in a vegetarian, or so-called non-flesh dietary, gives the patient a well-balanced course of treatment. The purpose of this work is to help nature restore health and put one in possession of knowledge that will help them know how to live to maintain health, for it is easier to lose than to regain.

STORAGE BATTERIES

Detection of Derangements—To distinguishe the difference between cells that are merely discharged and those that are out of order, put the battery on charge and then test it with a voltmeter. If the voltage of each cell does not rise to approximately 2 volts after the battery has been on charge for ten minutes or more, it is an indication of internal trouble which can be remedied only by dismantling the cell. When making voltage tests it must be born in mind that the voltage of a cold battery rises slightly above normal on charge and falls below normal on discharge. The reverse is true of a warm battery, that is, the voltage will be slightly less than normal on charge and higher than normal on discharge? For the purpose of simple tests for condition, voltage readings on discharge are preferable, as variations in readings on charge mean little except to a battery expert.

Joint Tests—As already explained, neither the hydrometer nor the voltmeter reading alone can always be taken as conclusive evidence of the condition of the battery. There are conditions under which one must be supplemented by the other to obtain an accurate indication of the state of the battery. In making any of the joint tests described later, it is important to take into consideration the four following points: (1) the effect of temperature on both voltage and hydrometer readings; (2) the voltage readings of an idle battery in good condition indicate nothing; (3) that the voltage of the charging current will cause the voltage of a battery in good condition to rise to normal, or above, the moment it is placed on charge, so that readings taken under such circumstances are not a good indication of the condition of the battery.

The following joint hydrometer and voltmeter tests will be found to cover the majority of cases met with in actual practice: (1) A voltage of 2 to 2.2 volts with a hydrometer reading of 1.275 to 1.300 indicates that the battery is fully charged and in good condition; (2) A voltage reading of less than 1.9 volts per cell with a hydrometer reading of 1.220 or less indicates that the battery is almost completely discharged; (3) A voltage readin of 1.9 volts or less per cell with a hydrometer readin 1.220 or more indicates that excess acid has been added to the cell. A 2-volt battery lamp connected to the terminals of the cell will burn only dimly, althouh the hydrometer reading alone would appear to indicate the battery or cell more than half charged; (4) Regardless of voltage. high, low or normal—a hydrometer reading over 1.300 indicates that an excesssive amount of acid has been added to the electrolyte (5) Where low voltage reading is found, as mentioned in cases (2) and (3), to determine whether the battery is in bad condition or merely discharged, stop the discharge by switching off the load and put the battery on charge. Then note whether the voltage of the cell rises promptly to 2 volts or more. If not, the suspected cell is probably short-circuited or in otherwise bad condition:

SIDELIGHTS

Long before broadcasting started the needs of the radio amateur, with his little transmitting and receiving station, was considered an interesting side line. Manufacturers did a comfortable business selling transformers, tubes, sockets, rheostats and other parts of apparatus to the amateur or person interested in assembling his own set, perhaps bit by bit, on the kitchen atble.

During this preliminary period about 90 per cent of the demand was for the component parts of the radio set and not for the assembled set. When broadcasting came along when everything was changed. The beginner then became the big factor in the business, by demanding whole sets rather than parts.

The beginner of today is not especially a mechanic, but he desires music and entertainment in a hurry and without much bother. The demand for assembled sets has become 90 per cent of the radio business. Of course, the demand for component parts has grown much greater than the demand a year ago.

MAKES SIMPLEST TEST AT SIXTY-CENT COST

WASHINGTON.—What is believed to be the simplest and most inexpensive (though not the smallest or most compact) radio receiving set has been designed by C. A. Briggs of this city. Mr. Briggs, who is connected with the weights and measures division of the bureau of standards, has followed closely recent developments in amateur radio, and his knowledge of the metric system and its extraordinary simplicity suggested the idea of constructing the simplest possible receiving set. As a result, the set which he has constructed is laid out entirely to metric dimensions, and he has designed it as metric set No. 1.

Aside from the antenna, ground wire, detector, and phones, which are necessary to all sets, the arrangement consists of two simple coils wound on strips of flat cardboard. No variable condenser or sliding contacts are necessary. All tuning within the range of the set can be accomplished by sliding one coil over the other, first using the upper one with one face turned to the top, and then with the other face turned up, according to the wave length of the incoming signal. The cost of all the material actually entering into the set, aside from the antenna and telephone receivers, will be about 60 cents, which includes the cost of the crystal detector and all necessary screws and other metal parts. As almost every one can locate some of this material around the house, the actual cost in many cases would probably be limited to 20 or 25 cents. With this set an airphone message broadcasted from Schenectady, 300 miles away, has been heard without amplification in Washington.

NEW STATIONS OPEN SOUTH TO FARM NEWS

WASHINGTON.—Arrangements for broadcasting weather, crop and market news by radiophone from Memphis, Jacksonville, Roswell, N. M., and Milwaukee, have been made by the department of agriculture. This will make 41 stations in the United States from which agricultural news is being broadcasted by airphone.

The radio news service of the department of agriculture was started in an experimental way less than 18 months ago. The practicability of getting market reports to farmers and other agricultural interests by this means was soon demonstrated. The department has received many requests from private and public agencies to furnish them with weather, crop and market news for broadcasting. These requests have been granted to stations licensed by the department of commerce to broadcast agricultural reports. Recently, the department of commerce assigned a wave length of 485 meters for the exclusive use of stations broadcasting agricultural news. This eliminates as far as possible any interference.

At Memphis, marketing conditions regarding cotton, fruits, vegetables, livestock, and other commodities at the important market centers of the country will be broadcast under a co-operative arrangement between the Memphis Press and the Reichman-Crosby company, an electrical firm. The reports will be telegraphed to Memphis from the St. Louis office of the bureau of markets and crop estimates, and will be augmented by reports of conditions in local markets. The broadcasting program for Florida will be conducted.

Secret radio communication has been carried on for 100 miles in and about London. Only the parties called could listen to the conversation. Marconi says that his new method of transmission has transatlantic possibilities which he will develop. This makes the third secret radio system to be announced as successful within a period of two weeks.

Recently the ring battle between Georges Carpentier and Kid Lewis in England was broadcast by a daily paper from a station on the roof of the Marconi building. One amateur who listened in claimed the news came so fast that he knew the results before Kid Lewis learned them.

There will be a special radio concert given in the J. A. Newton store, 154 South Brand boulevard, in addition to the rest of the program in celebration of their 12th anniversary.

FRISK'S FOOLISH PAW S GO WRONG AGAIN

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

The medicine for fools—the awful seed he'd seen Diver Beaver strangle over—Frisk Squirrel's mother was going to make him take one. To cure his foolishness! She most surely was—provided she could catch him.

But Frisk's scared paws didn't mean to be caught. They were carrying him pitter-pat, leap and jump, up the bank of the Wicked Little Brook. The widow chased him till she was out of breath before she turned back to her hole again; and there she grimly hid that seed under a bit of bark, where it would be handy by when Frisk came home.

Frisk didn't know where his

Down, Down, Down It Leaned Until It Almost Made a Bridge

paws were going—and he didn't care. Not now? Were they taking him into trouble? Well, it couldn't be much worse than the trouble they were leaving behind. If he could get across the stream he'd find his way to the Duck's Oak. Kind Mammy Gaywings would let him cuddle in with her till Daddy Green-crest got his mother soothed down. It was so narrow where he stood he could almost jump across. Not qui-ite. But —horrors! His fur fluffed up at the awful thought! His swimming feather was gone.

Yes, sir, he hadn't seen it since Diver Beaver gave it to him, back at the Pond. Where had he laid it down? Frisk coludn't think. 'Cause that was when things started happening. And he dassn't go back to look, 'cause his mammy'd catch him. Anyway, it was the black hour before dawn, too dark for looking. If he could only find a nice, safe place to snooze! Like Mammy Duck's nest. She'd find a feather for him. And he felt scary all alone.

But that Wicked Little Brook seemed to giggle at him, "I might as well be as broad as the Pond, mightn't I, now?"

It made him mad. "I'll show you if you'th tho' big!" he snarled, exactly as if it could understand him. He scrambled up a willow-stem. Up, up, up he went; down, down, down it leaned, till it almost made a bridge. It's springy tip-end tickled the other bank, where he wanted to be. He could jump that far—

But his paws just didn't seem to believe him. And when his paws got shaky-scared it was time to go slow. What was the water laughing at? Was there some sticky black mud, a dangerous trap for little squirrels, for him to land in? Or was someone lying in wait to pounce and catch him? Or was it just daring him to try? And now the willow branch itself seemed trying to scare him. What did it mean by dancing about?

NEXT STORY: A WISE PAW STOPS FRISK'S FOOLISH ONES.

RANDALL QUOTES GLENDALE PRESS IN CAMPAIGN

Heads Prohibition Literature With Editorial Quotation

"'One might excuse the Indians who sold Manhattan Island for a keg of wisky,' says the Glendale Press, 'but today the inhabitants of that island would apparently swap it for a keg of bootleg with a counterfeit label. This liquid-fire seems to be consuming the last element of patriotism and manhood in that proud city,' quotes Charles H. Randall in prohibition literature he is sending broadcast in his campaign.

"Mr. James Reeves, proprietor of a chain of 300 grocery stores in New York city, who recently visited San Francisco, declares that prohibition has increased the demand for California canned fruits," according to the San Francisco Journal of Commerce. "Business is fine in New York city," said Mr. Reeves, 'and we hardly know that the country has been through a depression. Our business this year will be over $20,000,000 gross.'

"'The quick transition from the days of old John Barleycorn, when brewers made the thirst quenching amber fluid, to 1922, when their plants are devoted to the manufacture of confections,' will be one of the features vizualized at the candy show now being held in Chicago, according to the Daily News of that city. 'The plaint of the brewery which manufactured the 'beer that made Milwaukee famous' is turning out chocolates by the ton.' Many other breweries in various parts of the country have been turned into candy factories.

"Candidates running on wet platforms in Pennsylvania went down to defeat; candidates who announced for beer and wine were overwhelmingly defeated. These are some examples: Congressman Burke, who included beer and wine as one of the planks in his platform, was defeated by Senator Pepper by over 200,000; in the Twelfth district, Harris Hamlin made beer and wine the dominant issue and was defeated by Congressman Clarence D. Coughlin; two candidates favoring beer and wine opposed Congressman Darrow, who was renominated by more than 4,000 votes; in the Twenty-ninth district, Otto Nick of Erie, running o na beer and wine platform, got only one vote in four, Congressman Shreve being renominated; in the Thirty-third district, Joseph Mayhugh, wet opponent of Clyde M. Kelly, received less than 4,000 votes and Mr. Kelly, a well-known dry leader, more than 10,000."

NOTHING?
ONE-TO-SEVEN.

Be patriotic this year, above all years. Celebrate the Fourth of July. Fireworks at 52 S. Raymond avenue. Best assortment in the city of Pasadena.—Adv.

BATTLE OF SKIRTS WAGES FIERCELY

The Long Have the Reach on the Short, But Both Go 'Round

NEW YORK, June 20.—The conflict between the long skirt and its knee-length sister is steadily growing more bitter and more desperate.

It has degenerated, as it inevitably must into a contest of streets—a battle between Fifth Avenue and Broadway. And, sisters just because Fifth Avenue is Fifth Avenue and Broadway is Broadway, don't rush in too early and decide that its all over but the cheering. Fifth Avenue has been defeated before in this never ending contest for style supremacy and may be again despite the fact that Paris is definitely allied with the "Avenoo" folks.

The "come back" of the long skirt is not popular with Broadway, because Broadway works and the ease and comfort of the short skirt has worn an indelible place for itself in the mind of the American girl. The knee-length skirt is "smart;" it has "snap" and ginger. It's not hard to fit; requires less goods and frankly, there are very few women living who do not believe but that they present a much more effective appearance in the short skirt than in its trailing prototype.

That is why the short skirt persists. Paris decreed its death almost a year ago. London meekly followed. But while the long skirt has unquestionably been making some popular gains, largely through the suberterfuge of the side panel, yet, excepting that thin veneer of people who take Parisian decrees as if handed down from the ultimate court of good taste, the long skirt has not yet been "put over."

And what makes this popular adherence to the short skirt even more remarkable is that it has occured in the fact of the desperate efforts of American and European dress manufacturers who have exhausted every effort on the part of press agent and ballyhoo to make it appear as if the abbreviated skirt was doomed to be relegated back to the benches and the chorus. To date however the American girl has not been appreciably stampeded.

The contrast was sharply illustrated recently at the opening of the fashionable race meeting at Belmont park. In the boxes Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Payne Whitney and Joan Whitney and Mrs. F. C. Converse all showed their loyalty to the long skirt. Mrs. Converse's skirt was particularly long, sweeping the very grass, even as her mother's did back in the days of the bustle and train of 1889.

On the other hand a group of "buds," including Miss Barbara Brokaw, Miss Beatrice Batterman and Miss Marion De Rahm, appeared in short sport skirts, slip-on sweaters and mushroom hats.

The brutal facts in this long and short skirt contest are that the "young" ladies past thirty five are generally found supporting the long length ideal, while the 'flappers" and those just growing out of the flapper period are still able to see much of an attractive nature about the short skirt—and, of course, in this they are not entirely alone.

If the question of the short or long skirt were placed before the Town Meeting it's almost a certainty that the "eyes" would have it.

There is a rumor that one of the New York corset and brassiere manufacturers is going to produce a new form-fitting brassiere. Women who wear brassiers have never been content with the tight straight bandeaux and brassieres that give one that shapeless appearance. This new brassiere promises to support the bust and at the same time leave an indentation at the center front which any figure should have.

White sandles with blunt toes that are like children's shoes with cut work over the toes are popular with sport clothes.

Many of the summer sunshades are small and dome-shaped.

At the Greenwich Village Fashion show the most noticeable novelty was the hand-painted legs. Many of the models were stockingless with designs of batik painted upon their limbs. Why paint the lily?

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

CONTENT

Life will have some cloudy weather,
Skies are always gray somewhere,
But put good and bad together
And the average is fair.
Life's not always sun and roses
And there's many a day that closes
Sort o' sad.

I've had lots of hopes that haunted
Me and dreams that came not true,
Many things there were I wanted,
Much the same perhaps as you.
There have been big trout I've fished for,
There have been great joys I've wished for,
And not had.

But while there has been some sadness,
And a bit of vain regret,
There has been a lot of gladness
That I'm glad for even yet.
And some days may have bad weather
But I find them all together
Not so bad.

So I pray me not to mind it
When the cloudy days may be,
If I take life as I find it,
It is good enough for me.
And for all the days have taught me,
For the tears and smiles they've brought me,
I am glad.

The Curse of Affluence

By JOHN BRECK

There was a time when my dog was as frank, as amiable, and as easy-going as any creature with a clear conscience has a right to be. That was when she lived in the country. She drew her modest pay at the kitchen door; she knew a rat from the granary was as good as a draft on the bank if she wanted more, or she could always scare up a bunny or stalk a squirrel if that was the way she preferred to earn it.

But things have altered since she came to town. She is up betimes, making her morning rounds with uncommon ador, the one through the blackberry bushes and across the garden, the one which leads past my neighbor's garage, and the very surreptitious one, taken with many a sly look over her shoulder, where she wades the brook and creeps into an orchard, obviously unaware that her paws have beaten a clear trail to each destination.

She is not cordial to callers of her own kind, though I was honestly surprised when she marched up to a little yellow dog in the next block and gave him a sound, though apparently unprovoked, thrashing. Hard words passed in more than dog-talk on that occasion.

The incident puzzled me until it called to mind a Bulgarian folk-tale about the creation. Certain beasts were loth to endure their fates for the years the Lord had allotted them. They begged Him to take some back. But man asked for them. So he was to live his original lifetime, of thirty years, carefree and gay as the Lord intended him, then ten ox-years of hard labor and plain living, and fifteen from the dog. He would fawn for favors, become strictly law-abiding, surly and suspicious in the effort to guard the fruits of his ox-industry.

Now doesn't that seem to malign us both? But my dog does fawn for favors, at other back doors mine, and gets them, too. She treasures them in secret; woe betide the strange dog who disregards the taboo she sets on her trails of inspection. Some visitors are duly scrupulous; these she esteems, after satisfying herself by some very careful sniffing. But heaven help that yellow weakling who cannot resist the temptation to nose them out, for I certainly shall not. Yet I cannot but regret that affluence has such a bad effect on her disposition.

Aye, the parable is certainly right—where dogs are concerned. As to men, you are welcome to your own conclusions.

CALIFORNIA IS SUPREME ON TRACK

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—The East, by no less staid and sober authority than the New York Times, has conceded the track supremacy of the West. A recent article in the Times said:

"The little band of 15 athletes from the University of California came East and did just what had been predicted.

"Without any question they are the best group of college track and field athletes in the country.

"Stanford university, with another small detachment, bested all the Eastern teams except Princeton. Add to these two facts the various dazzling feats of Charley Paddock, sprinter and record-breaker of Pasadena, and the record of Western supremacy is written.

"It has been established under the stress of actual competition."

Even with this tribute, Westerners are not entirely satisfied.

"If Stanford hadn't run into a little bad luck, especially as regards Lane Falk, hurdler, even Princeton wouldn't have had a look-in," they say. "It would have been one, two for the West."

Two managers were discussing the possibilities of a certain candidate for Cinderella in a London pantomime. They admitted she had her share of good looks, but, said one, dubiously, knowing the lady's very weakest point.

"Do you think she could get her feet into the crystal slipper?"

"She couldn't get it into the Crystal Palace," was the candid reply.

Vacation Days

Once more the time draws near for your summer vacation. Eagerly you are looking forward to its arrival as proffering you opportunity for a restful break in the routine of your workaday life.

See to it that you do make your vacation really synonymous with rest. Many workers, far too many workers, do not.

Because their vacation period is necessarily brief they seem to think that they must make it a period of super-activity. Never do they work so hard as during the fortnight of their freedom from work.

On their return they may say—and they may sincerely believe—that they have had a wonderful vacation. But soon they are forced to ask themselves why it is that this exceptionally fine vacation has had anything but invigorating effects so far as the performance of their business duties is concerned.

And the tragedy of it is that those most in need of rest—the nervously tense, hence the nervously exhausted—are precisely the ones most likely to give themselves over-strenuous vacations. Instead of slipping away to recuperate in quiet rural retreats, they rush to crowded resorts for the excessive gayety which is the last thing they should seek.

They are sure that they would be "bored to extinction" if obliged to content themselves with the simple pleasures of orchard and meadow, of field and forest, of dell and brook and tree-encircled pond. How can they be sure of this if they have never made the experiment?

You perhaps are one of those unfortunate folk obsessed with a desire to be perpetually in motion amid vacation crowds, likewise obsessed with a passion for motion. If so, tell me, are yon not sometimes, possibly often, troubled with a vague discontent you cannot explain, a consciousness that you are being cheated out of something worth while?

Try a new vacation plan this year.

Don't go back to "Turmoil-by-the-Sea" or "Jazz Haven." Select instead some well recommended farmhouse that takes a few—exceedingly few—boarders. Persuade a congenial friend—not too "chattery" a one—to accompany you there.

Take along sensible clothes for tramping through rough country. Take along some good fiction. And most certainly take along a few simple books on birds and trees and wild-flowers that will help you really to get acquainted with nature.

If you have never had any real acquaintance with nature before, a rare treat is in store for you. "Bored" you will not be after you once taste the delights that the open country, with its mysteries and its charms, holds for the weary and overwrought.

And when you return to the city it will be not merely with improved health, but with a clearer understanding of the possibilities of life sanely lived. You may, to be sure, drift once more into your former feverish ways that make for a mounting restlessness. But I do not believe you will.

PREDICT RUSH TO PORTLAND FIESTA

Southern Pacific Expects Attendance Records Will Be Broken

The Fifteenth Annual Rose Festival and Floral Pageant is to be held in Portland, Ore., June 20 to 23, inclusive, and is expected to break all previous records in point of attendance, according to Charles S. Fee, passenger traffic manager for the Southern Pacific company.

Fee explains that his belief is based on the fact that this celebration follows closely on the Shrine convention in San Francisco and many of the visiting nobles will return to their homes by way of the "Rose City." Special reduced rates have been announced by the Southern Pacific for those who wish to attend this event.

Features of the festival will be the arrival of the "Princess" down the beautiful Willamette river, accompanied by gaily decorated water craft; impressive coronation ceremony of "Queen Harriet"; a rose show, an annual regatta in which motor boats, racing shells and other water craft will participate; athletic contests in Multnomah field, Portland's natural amphitheater; floral parade, in which over 200 gorgeously decorated floats will take part; a sporting and tourist exposition portraying scenic beauties of the Pacific Northwest and a civic band.

Three entire blocks in the heart of Portland have been transferred into a beautiful garden elaborately decorated with clusters and strings of richly colored electric lights. Approximately $10,000 will be awarded in prizes to winners in the various contests.

"Scrambled eggs," ordered a customer in a busy restaurant. "Milk toast," murmured his companion, who was not feeling well. "Scrambled two and a graveyard stew," sang out the waitress with the Titian hair. "Here," corrected the second man. "I want milk toast."

"You'll get it, Buddy," replied the girl. "That's what they call milk toast down in Pittsburgh where I worked."

The two customers held a conference and decided to "put one over" on the "fresh young thing" from Pittsburgh. The first one wanted a glass of milk and the second a cup of black coffee. When the girl appeared to put a "set up" of the restaurant artillery in front of the men the second man gave the following order: "A bottle of lacteal fluid for my friend and a scuttle of Java with no seafoam for me."

"Chalk one an' a dipper o' ink," shouted the girl. She didn't even smile.

NOTHING?
ONE-TO-SEVEN.

SPIDER STROTHER SIGNS CONTRACT WITH MOVIES

Strother Will Climb Pomona Buildings Friday for Practice

"Bill" Strother, the human spider, who fell several weeks ago from a building in Burbank, visited the Glendale Press office yesterday. It was his first day out of the hospital.

Strother fell from the second story of a building he was climbing in Burbank several weeks ago. In the fall he injured his leg and has, since his fall, been in the Cottage hospital.

"Bill" said that he hated to leave the hospital for they treated him so nice there and he is afraid that he will miss the chicken dinners that are served patients.

"Bill" said, "I heard that the report has been circuated that I was killed in my fall at Burbank. If I was, this is the first I knew of it. On Friday I am going to climb a building in Pomona and in several other cities in that district. I have signed a contract and will enter the moving pictures in about two weeks. If I am dead I am the livest dead man you ever saw."
